Message from your ME

Dear Colleagues

Today we give rise to Network Centre Operations.....a newly designed organization that is positioned to be at the “center” of customer experience, service delivery, network performance and field force efficiency. The structural design brings together all service and network operations centers, regardless of product or technology, and also paves the way for fixed and mobile synergies and integration. I would like to take the opportunity to congratulate and welcome all of you in the Network Centre Operations organization. I consider myself privileged and honored to lead this extraordinary team and know that we have the collective capacity and capability to take the organization into the future.

With the pressures facing Telkom and with only 6 months to go to the end of the financial year, there is no time to waste and we will have to hit the road running. As a leadership team we will have to consolidate the new organiza- tion with speed and drastically step up performance as failure on our financial, customer experience and service targets is not negotiable.

Our journey towards tomorrow starts today and it is exiting to know that you have all declared yourself “fit” and ready to take NCO into the future. We cannot afford that any one of us runs out of steam, so I trust that you are prepared - along the road it will be expected of us to sprint, run a marathon, complete and obstacle course, re-sur- face the road and build a new track altogether.

Over the coming weeks I will be working closely with some of you to ensure that we review and confirm our core purpose, strategic direction and focus areas which will include golden tread performance measures in support of overall company performance.

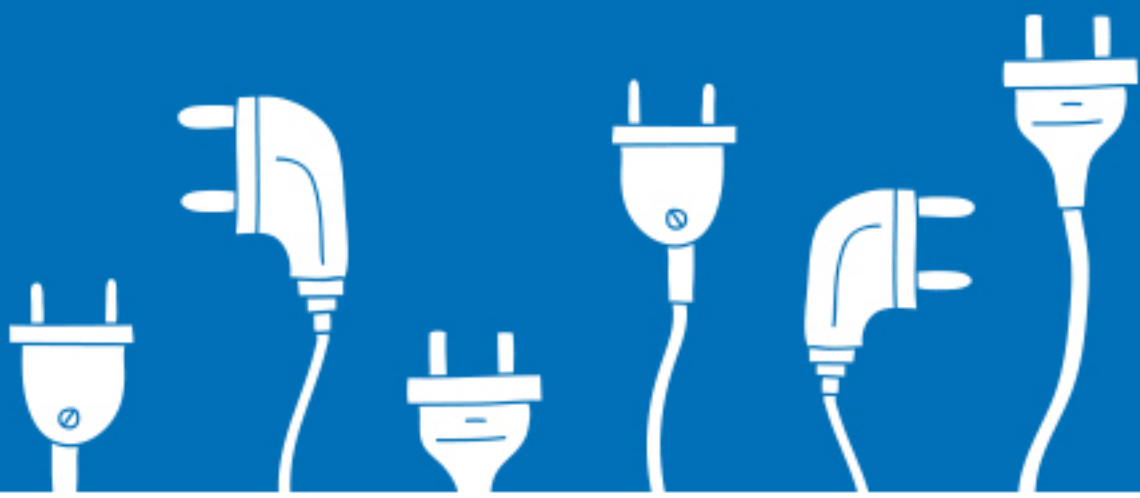

We will challenge each other every day to ensure that we are an organization that represents excellence!

I am looking forward to get to know and work with all of you.

Yours sincerely

Service Management

A service is a means of delivering value to customers by facilitating outcomes customers want to achieve without the ownership of specific costs and risks.

Introduction

It has become increasingly recognised that information is the most important strategic resource that any organisation has to manage. Key to the collection, analysis, production and distribution of information within an organisation is the quality of the IT Services provided to the business. It is essential that we recognise that IT Services are crucial, strategic, organisational assets and therefore organisations must invest appropriate levels of resource into the support, delivery and management of these critical IT Services and the IT systems that underpin them. However, these aspects of IT are often overlooked or only superficially addressed within many organisations.

Key issues facing many of today's senior Business Managers and IT Managers are:

- IT and business strategic planning
- Integrating and aligning IT and business goals
- Implementing continual improvement
- Measure IT organisation effectiveness & efficiency
- Optimising costs & Total Cost of Ownership (TCO)
- Achieve and demonstrate Return on Investment (ROI)
- Demonstrating the business value of IT
- Develop business & IT partnerships and relationships
- Improving project delivery success
- Outsourcing, insourcing and smart sourcing
- Using IT to gain competitive advantage
- Deliver the required, business justified IT services (i.e. what is required, when required & at agreed cost)
- Managing constant business and IT change
- Demonstrating appropriate IT governance.

IT managers are facing many challenges

The challenges for IT managers are to co-ordinate and work in partnership with the business to deliver high quality IT services. This has to be achieved while adopting a more business and customer oriented approach to delivering services and cost optimisation.

The primary objective of Service Management is to ensure that the IT services are aligned to the business needs and actively support them. It is imperative that the IT services underpin the business processes, but it is also increasingly important that IT acts as an agent for change to facilitate business transformation.

All organisations that use IT depend on IT to be successful. If IT processes and IT services are implemented, managed and supported in the appropriate way, the business will be more successful, suffer less disruption and loss of productive hours, reduce costs, increase revenue, improve public relations and achieve its business objectives.

About the Telkom GCEO Awards

Recognition programmes form an integral part of motivating employees to perform beyond what is expected of them. In a competitive environment, what distinguishes Telkom from its competitors is the level and standard of service that our employees provide to our customers, innovation and revenue optimisation.

The GCEO recognition awards is intended to achieve the following:

- Align service organisation recognition programmes
- Increase employee participation by including support staff
- Align employee recognition with company objectives

The award is the ultimate recognition level within Telkom and the Group Chief Executive Officer hosts a prestigious recognition function for the award recipients.

The event celebrates the contributions made by individuals or teams. The reward is an overseas trip for the recipients and their partners, reflecting the eminence of being recognised in this category. This year's event will be held on the 26 July 2013.

About Us

About Us

To become a "World-class Supply Chain enabling organisation, as well as a Telkom-Wide point of excellence supporting the achievement of Telkom's strategic business goals through delivery of excellent products and services at optimised costs and whose employee composition reflects the demographics of South Africa.

You, as a valuable Internal Customer, are very much part of the Supply Chain as are the external vendors and suppliers of goods and services, in South Africa and abroad. I therefore solicit any feedback regarding our service so that our team can provide the support and service required.

Procurement Services have the responsibility for the optimization and efficient management of the supply chain as well as being an active participant in formulating the company's Black Economic Empowerment Program.

The bar has been raised and there are significant challenges facing Procurement Services. These challenges include revenue growth, operating margins, asset efficiencies and other business imperatives. The reward in meeting and exceeding these drivers will result in the receiving the Oscar of business, Added Shareholder Value.

Added Shareholder Value will only be achieved through the commitment, dedication and cooperation of all the role players in the Subject Matter Expert Teams and Cross Functional Sourcing Teams through which we can procure, supply and deliver goods and services that will enable our network to deliver benefits our investors, shareholders, employees and the public who use our services. The participation of a team member in these groups should be above individual and sectional interest and to the benefit of Telkom as a whole.

The Procurement Services Team will continue to focus and align to the ever-changing needs in the world of the Information, Communication and Technology (ICT) sector and customer needs.

I trust that you will keep in touch with Procurement Services through any one of our Staff at Head Office and in the Regions.

Summer is HERE!

The wait is over! Brand new customer offerings have been launched! We invite our customers to rethink Telkom's value! Rethink how they can benefit from our great offerings and rekindle their relationship with our team! Our teamwork will paint their world in the new colour splashes of Telkom value!

We are stepping up to the plate and rising to the challenge. We are offering our customers more value, wider options and a promise of an excellent customer experience when our colour splashes into their world. However, only dedicated teamwork will deliver these promises.

We are building our brand and pursuing business success. We need to significantly improve our customer service and enhance the experience our customers have when they do business with us. Not only are they the reason we are in business, without their support we will not be able to secure our business future! Everyone in Telkom, regardless of where you work and what you do, now need to go that extra step to exceed the expectations of our customers.

As one Telkom team, we need to give our customers good reason to rethink Telkom's value. We must Think Telkom to deliver the promise of great product packages, value for money, convenient voice and data connections and a truly converged product offering – all wrapped up in great customer service.

Think about your role in the Telkom team. Think about your part in our shared future in a changed and revived Telkom. You have your part to play regardless of your role – if everyone does their bit diligently to support the bigger Telkom picture, everyone wins because everyone in Telkom owns our shared bright future.

Consider also that customer service is not a department. It is everyone's responsibility. In one way or the other, we are all here to serve the customer.

Support the summer campaign by becoming a product ambassador. Know the products, educate your friends and family, tell them about the value and help generate revenue!

Think Team. Think Customer. Think Telkom!

Presents a world first

Afrijet_{IR}

Home

A world first, the Afrijet infra-red flatbed printer will cover many of the applications of a UV flatbed printer at a fraction of the cost. It is first printer to be conceptualized and assembled right here in South Africa and the proud new flagship of the Nashakele range of quality products.

Effortlessly alternate between flatbed and traditional roll-to-roll substrates, this little gem can print directly on to a variety of substrates including correx, ABS, Perspex, glass and even leather. The malleability of the inks makes it ideal for vacuum forming applications too.

Also available in Eco Solvent & Textile Printing
